DEFINITION OF HOMEWORK

AIMS OF GIVING HOMEWORK TO STUDENTS

- To reinforce lessons taught
- To provide evidence of work done
- To foster independent learning
- To help the teacher to assess the understanding of the work
- Preparation for exam.

NATURE OF HOMEWORK GIVEN TO THE STUDENTS

The nature of the homework given to the students varies from time to time and from subject to subject, depending on the type of learning taking place within each subject at any particular time.

The school identifies two categories of Homework:

- 1) Set Homework
- 2) Study Homework

1) SET HOMEWORK

Set Homework is the day-to-day work or assignments given in all subjects, to be completed within a certain period of time.

Homework may include the following:

- Written exercises
- Reading over notes

- Learning formulae, vocabulary, spelling
- Preparing oral work
- Reviewing a novel

- Independent work for classroom topics
- Physical activity

2) STUDY HOMEWORK

Study Homework is the work given to revise in-class activities or to prepare for in-house examinations and State examinations. It consists of revision of previously learned material.

RECOMMENDED TIME ALLOCATION FOR HOMEWORK

The quality of homework tasks is more important than the length of time that tasks might take. However, the school acknowledges that a regular and consistent daily habit of homework is essential for the students to develop independent study skills and to consolidate the work done with their teachers in the classroom.

The homework demands on the students' time will increase progressively as they move through the school and the amount of time students spend on homework will vary. However, as a general guide, the school recommends the following:

First Year Students	1 – 1½ hours
Second Year Students	1½ – 2 hours
Third Year Students	2 – 3 hours
Fourth Year Students	Varies in accordance with amount of project work.
